Subject: Microsoft anti-trust case

I was quite disappointed when I heard that the prosecutors were going to let Microsoft off with a slap on the hand (again). It was so ineffective before, I am amazed that anyone would consider it this time. While I don't know how to deal with the monopolistic and predatory business practices that Microsoft continues to employ, but to let them off without sufficient safeguards is simply asking for more of the same. the current plan does NOT provide enough protection for the consumer, and does not level the playing field for competitors. This is something that I was brought up to believe was an integral part of our business model.

I was pleased to hear that your office also feels that the proposed remedy is insufficient. Please continue to pursue this until a fair settlement is reached.

Thank you,

George Wagner
